AUSSIE ANIMALS

QUOKKAS

The Quokka is a small macropod about the size of a domestic cat and it is found in Western Australia. Though they resemble rodents, Quokkas are actually marsupials, like kangaroos and wallabies.

WALLABIES

Did you know that Australia has over 70 species of macropods, ranging from the tiny Musky Rat Kangaroo to the giant Red Kangaroos seen in the Outback? Meet, pat and hand feed tame kangaroos, pademelons and wallabies.

WOMBATS

The loveable Wombat is fast becoming Australia's favourite marsupial. With a lumbering gait, and a strong, solid body they have amazing burrowing capabilities earning them the nickname, "bulldozers of the bush".

Aussie Bush Collection

Our new Aussie Bush Collection has a fascinating mixture of marsupials and reptiles living together in the one 'Aussie' environment.

AUSSIE REPTILES

LIZARDS, PYTHONS & CROCS

Australia is home to the world's most amazing collection of lizards, dragons, monitors and pythons. Camouflage is their key to survival, so take your time and try to find them.

Crocodiles have been part of the Australian eco-system for millions of years. Here you will find Freshwater Crocodiles which inhabit our northern inland river systems.

PIONEERING HISTORY

Kuranda Koala Gardens is operated by descendants of one of Kuranda's pioneering families. Learn about the construction of the Cairns to Kuranda railway and the early timber industry. Bullock teams hauled huge logs out of the rainforest to the Kuranda railway station.
